

EFSD

European Foundation for the Study of Diabetes

EFSD and Japan Diabetes Society (JDS)

Reciprocal Travel Research Fellowship Programme 2020

The objective of the EFSD/JDS Reciprocal Travel Research Fellowship Programme is to encourage collaborative research in the field of diabetes. Applications for Fellowships to carry out a scientific project will be accepted from both applicants working in Japan to travel to Europe or its associated countries and also from applicants working in Europe or its associated countries to travel to Japan. The host institution must be a recognised research institution and applicants should have demonstrated their ability in the field of diabetes research.

Up to four Fellowships will be awarded, each in the sum of up to Euro 50,000 (fifty thousand) for the applicants from Europe or 5 million Japanese Yen for the applicants from Japan. The money awarded will be paid into the account of the recipients' home institution. The scientific project will be one to twelve months in length with some extra time allowed to complete a language course. The budget may include items such as salaries, travel, sustenance and consumables. The recipients must start the fellowship within six months of notification.

Applications may be made by any scientist or clinician who is working in a postdoctoral position, with no age restriction. Each applicant will need to provide a letter of support from both the home and the host institution.

Please send your application in PDF form as an email attachment by 18:00 (CET) on the deadline date to Foundation@easd.org.

Deadline for Applications: 1 July 2020

Application forms may be downloaded from the EFSD website:

www.EuropeanDiabetesFoundation.org